Lucca is one of Italy’s principle Cities of art, it is known worldwide for its city wall, still intact, that dates from 15-17th cent. It is about 4.450 m circa and surrounds the historic nucleus of the city that is one of 4 Italian boroughs to have a circular wall intact. In the second half of the 19thcent it was transformed into a walkway and is one of the best preserved in Europe. Consequently the historic centre within the walls has remained more or less intact so that you admire the architecture and in particular the medieval churches. Lucca was named the “City of the 100 churches”, for its churches bell towers and its beautifully styled renaissance buildings.
